

Using the Sourcebook

When compiling this seventh edition of the AIB Global Broadcasting Sourcebook, we have translated job titles into English-language equivalents to provide consistency between companies.

It is worth noting that the term "manager" when used in Western Europe and North America tends to be a relatively junior post, below that of department head, for example. However, in some areas of the world - including parts of the Middle East, Eastern Europe and countries of the Former Soviet Union - "manager" is a far more senior title, and can be equivalent to director or board level posts in Western European nomenclature.

Wherever possible, the main switchboard of the company has been listed, along with a central fax number. The country code is the first group of digits in both the telephone and fax numbers shown.

The principal website of the organisation is shown immediately after the phone and fax numbers.

Whilst every care has been taken in compiling this latest Sourcebook, inevitably errors will creep in. That's why we issue regular updates to AIB members and to people who have bought either the PDF or print editions of this directory.

If you spot an error, or if you are listed and are changing jobs, please let us know. E-mail sourcebook@aib.org.uk with the changes so we can keep colleagues across the international media industry up-to-date.
